

What the Client Adviser can do for you

The RIBA Client Adviser is the strategic contributor to effective projects giving high value advice that is a tiny fraction of the value created and costs incurred over the life of the facility. RIBA Client Advisers are the only accredited independent client adviser in the UK building design, infrastructure, facilities and construction sectors. The service improves clients' decision making, risk management and benefits delivery through:

- helping to define outcomes and the project;
- setting up a decisive client team;
- managing stakeholder / shareholder engagement;
- economic, social and ecological sustainability expertise;
- researching and writing the Brief;
- knowing how to take the project to market;
- being able to communicate with the supply chain;
- asking intelligent questions of the client and team;
- embedding users into the project once completed;
- reviewing independently, proposals and decisions.

George Stowell RIBA Client Adviser

In his role as a Client Adviser, George will raise your effectiveness in decision making so that you are more certain about achieving the outcomes you value the most in the most sustainable ways.

His experience across a wide range of client types and projects, both large and small has developed over the last twenty one years. Roles include design, management, quality assurance and consultancy work on many award winning projects across Europe both with his own practice and prior to 2005, with two world class London based architectural practices.

Client Adviser services make projects easier and more certain for clients and users through effective strategy, planning and expert knowledge. Services add value, improve resource efficiency and lead to better outcomes that are valued the most ...
